Teshuva

תְּשׁוּבָה

Repentance

Teshuva is the process of correcting our ways, making up with those we wronged, and thinking about where we missed the mark.

Teshuva is about admitting our mistakes, recognizing the great opportunities we should have taken, committing to being better, and taking actionable steps to get there.

Teshuva happens when we return to who we really are meant to be.

When we pray, we ask Hashem to grant us all we need and desire.

We pray to grow closer to Hashem each and every day.

But more than that, we pray so as to judge ourselves, to rethink our values, and determine how we're doing each day in living up to who we know deep down we can and should be.

Teshuva

תְּשׁוּבָה

Repentance

When we give Tzedaka we fulfill part of our Divine duty as Jews to perfect the world (Tikkun Olam).

Hashem doesn't owe us anything. In his infinite kindness he gave us our lives and families and provides for us each and every day.

So too, though we may not owe others our hard-earned money, we follow Hashem's lead to do the right thing to give to those in need.

Tzedaka is Righteousness. Tzedaka is kindness.
Tzedaka is an act of Social Justice.

(Return)

Teshuva is the process of correcting our ways, making up with those we wronged, and thinking about where we missed the mark. Teshuva is about admitted our mistakes, recognizing the great opportunities we should have taken, committing to being better, and taking actionable steps to get there. Teshuva is about returning to our truest, holiest selves. Teshuva happens when we return to who we really are meant to be.
